During my conversations with [REDACTED] on 18 December I discovered that both of them are rather critical of some of the lectures given at the dependents briefings. Specifically, they think too much time is being devoted to security and cover--there are about four lectures on this subject. And they are also dubious of the quality of a couple of speakers on cover and of the speaker on "Conduct Overseas." However, neither Paul nor Bill is quite sure what to do about this because the persons concerned are from the DD/P and neither Paul nor Bill feels that he has a charter to move in on the DD/P participants.

This might well be an area where [REDACTED] can do a good deed. 25X1A9a
I would suggest you consider having him monitor one of the dependents briefings and maybe we can figure out a politic way to get his judgments across to DD/P. Out of this might also come an instructor training session for the individuals who are lecturing in this affair.
